

KIX EAP Podcast – Episode 4

Speaker biographical note

Aminath Shafiya Adam (PhD) works as an assistant professor at The Maldives National University, located in Male, Maldives. Her position involves teaching in the teacher education program and the supervision of postgraduates to train as educators for the various islands that comprise the nation. Her scholarship ranges from the early years of preschool to the development of higher education, which includes projects sponsored by the Ministry of Education to improve student learning. She is especially interested in how digital technologies such as video pedagogy can drive innovation and collaboration among educators. Her research has caught the attention of local media, frequently being featured on outlets to contextualize educational improvements on the Maldives. Dr. Adam's educational background spans the globe, receiving her from the Al-Azhar University (Egypt), a Bachelor of Education International Islamic University (Malaysia), and a Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Waikato (New Zealand).
